SELECTED PUBLICATIONS & PRESENTATIONS:

The Undead Urban Horde: Zombie Shotguns, Survivalist Paraphernalia, and Rural Literacies

The Journal of Popular Culture: August 2018

Article explores the link between the popularity of zombie survival preppers and a decline in the valuing of traditional rural literacies by mainstream, urban culture.

The Process of Protest: The Harry M. Bracken Papers as an Archive of Anti-Vietnam War Activism at Arizona State University

ASU Department of Archives and Special Collections Public Presentation, April 27, 2016.

Featured speaker discussing my work with the Harry M. Bracken collection at the ASU Department of Archives and Special Collections. My talk centered on how documentary filmmakers can best work with, understand, and utilize academic and institutional archives.

The Business of Post-Production

Presentation for Phoenix Independent Film Project (IFP), March 17, 2016

Featured speaker discussing the current state of post-production within low to mid budget independent film projects. Focused specifically on how new post technologies (specifically in terms of finishing, visual effects, and color grading) can create more efficient and less costly workflows.

If You Take the Zombie Out of the Island, Do you Take The Island Out of the Zombie?

Presentation for Western States Rhetoric and Literacy Conference, October 31, 2015

Presentation concerning my work exploring how creatures originally (and solely) linked to the Caribbean islands, evolved into the “ghouls” which shambled around suburban Pittsburgh in George Romero’s 1968 film Night of the Living Dead? Are the island roots of the zombie a fundamental part of the zombie trope and its renewed cultural significance?

Careers in Film and Television

Co-Author with Chris Jensen, Premium Source Publishing, 2015

Introductory level film business/production textbook covering: career pathways in the media; personal branding, including social media and crowd funding; resume and interview techniques; forming LLC's and production companies; contracts, releases and deal memos; and 1st Amendment, privacy and copyright law basics.

Sustainable Brain Eating
